

BSc Psychology

Course Outline

Structure of the Bachelor's Degree:

To complete the bachelor's degree in Psychology, you need to fulfil the following requirements:

Core Courses:

- Eight 15-credit compulsory modules at FHEQ Level 4.
- Eight 15-credit compulsory modules at FHEQ Level 5.
- Six 15-credit compulsory modules at FHEQ Level 6.

Research Component:

- One 30-credit Research Project.

Research Project Breakdown:

- A 15-credit Research Project Preparation module.
- A 30-credit Research Project.

Intermediate Qualifications:

As you progress through your bachelor's studies, you have the option to apply for intermediate qualifications, such as:

- Certificate of Higher Education (CertHE) in Psychology.
- Diploma of Higher Education (DipHE) in Psychology.

This structure indicates a comprehensive and progressive approach to studying psychology, providing you with the opportunity to achieve intermediate qualifications and specialise in research during the later stages of your degree.

Psychology Module Structure:

Level 4:

Research Design and Statistics 1A
Research Design and Statistics 1B
Applications of Psychology
Developmental Psychology

Learning, Personality, and Intelligence
Biological Psychology
Social Psychology
Research Skills 1: Qualitative Skills

Level 5:

Research Skills 2: Literature Skills Cognitive Psychology
Understanding Individual Differences
Research Design and Statistics 2A: Analysis of Variance Health and Addictive Behaviours
Research Design and Statistics 2B: Multivariate Measures Philosophy of Psychology
Clinical Psychology

Level 6:

Current Issues in Neuroscience
Gender and Mental Health Mental Health Around the World
Occupational Psychology
Forensic Psychology
Research Project

- Research Project 1: Foundation
- Research Project 2: Consolidation

This module structure provides a comprehensive overview of various domains within psychology, covering foundational concepts in the initial levels and delving into specialised and current issues at the higher levels. The inclusion of a research project in the final level emphasises hands-on research experience and consolidation of knowledge gained throughout the program.